EMEFA COLE

Jewellery designer

The standout look from this year's Met Gala? Michaela Coel, clad in an embellished Schiaparelli gown and dripping in fully traceable, single-mine-origin West African gold. Ghanaian British designer Emefa Cole is the woman behind those epically proportioned jewels. "For a majority of people, jewellery is just a shiny piece of gold," she says. "But we need to think about where things come from." A pioneer of ethically sourced accessories, in September 2022 Cole was appointed by the V&A as its first curator of diaspora jewellery. The Londoner sees this as not only a career landmark, but "an opportunity to spotlight people who would usually slip through the cracks".
